Biographical Information

Samuel Miller (1769-1850) was born in Dover, Delaware and received his education at the University of Pennsylvania and through pastoral internship. After many years of service as a Presbyterian minister (including pastor of First/Wall Street Presbyterian Church in New York City), Dr. Miller became the second professor at Princeton Theological Seminary in 1813. He taught Ecclesiastical History and Church Government at Princeton Seminary until shortly before his death in 1850. He was the author of several books and numerous scholarly articles and published sermons, many of which remain currently in print to this day.

Scope and Content

This collection consists of a variety of personal papers of Dr. Miller gathered from a number of sources. Among the items in this collection are sermons, course lecture notes, correspondence, bibliography, genealogy, articles, autobiography, and miscellany.
